Scott Williams has been a since 1978 but really traces his membership back to 1961 through his father who was in the classification of attorney previously. They were partners in their law practice and Scott initially came in as his father's Associate Member. His father was president of the EALB in 1966. Scott is currently on the Board of Directors of the EALB.

Scott was drafted into the Army in 1967. He married Janie (another past EALB member and past President) in 1969 and together they have two children and two grandchildren.

Scott graduated law school in 1977 and passed the bar that July. He was offered a job in his youth by Larry H. Parker but turned him down. If only he knew then what he knows now. He has been practicing law for almost 40 years. His focus is business law and enjoys setting up corporations, advising corporations and handling business law suits and appeals.

Scott warns about the trappings of a corporation that should be a shield but could become a corporate veil that can be easily pierced if not correctly maintained. Before incorporating think about what your liabilities are and consider what the cost of additional insurance would be instead. That could be a more advantageous route for your individual needs.

If you do setup a corporation make sure you do your minutes otherwise you are invalidating your corporation. At the very least you should be doing annual minutes to elect new directors, to add leases and or major purchases. Be sure to leave personal information out of your minutes such as health records.

If you are considering incorporating or need business related legal advice please contact Scott Williams. He comes highly recommended by members of the EALB.
